1 What is the BNC Sampler?

The BNC Sampler is a subset of the British National Corpus (BNC). This document offers a short introduction to the BNC Sampler corpus, with an outline of the areas where the Sampler differs from the BNC XML Edition. Detailed information about the design and construction of the BNC can be found in the Reference Guide for the British National Corpus (XML Edition) at <http://www.natcorp.ox.ac.uk/XMLedition/URG/>.

The BNC Sampler consists of two collections of written and spoken material of about one million words each, originally compiled to mirror the composition of the full BNC as far as possible. The BNC Sampler was initially used for a tagging enhancement project at Lancaster University. It was annotated with a more detailed set of part-of-speech tags than the BNC and the annotation was manually checked and post-edited. The results of this tagging enhancement project fed into the development of the second edition of the BNC (BNC World, 2001).

The BNC Sampler is thus likely to be of interest to:

- those who wish to use a smaller corpus with equal amounts of written and spoken material ;
- those who want a resource with highly detailed and accurate part-of-speech annotation.

1.1 Composition of the BNC Sampler

As noted above, one motivation for the original design of the BNC Sampler was that it should reflect as far as possible the full variety of text types in the full BNC, even though the BNC itself was not yet complete at the time the texts were selected. The texts were chosen and classified according to the full range of selection criteria defined at the start of the BNC project, and thus form an interesting example of ‘balanced’ corpus design. The following tables demonstrate the composition of the Sampler with respect to all of the original BNC design criteria.

2 Format of the BNC Sampler

The first edition of the BNC Sampler (1997) was distributed in SGML format; this version has been automatically converted to XML but no other changes have been made to the files. The original documentation for the SGML version is available from the BNC website at <http://www.natcorp.ox.ac.uk/corpus/sampler/>, and includes full information about the CLAWS part-of-speech tagging applied to the Sampler, including a description of the CLAWS system itself.

There are several differences between the format of the BNC Sampler (in its second edition) and the BNC XML Edition.

tagset for linguistic annotation As noted above, the BNC Sampler has been manually annotated with a more detailed tagset than the BNC XML Edition. More information about the tagset (CLAWS 7) used in the sampler is available from the BNC website (http://www.natcorp.ox.ac.uk/corpus/sampler/guide\_C7.htm).

lemmatization Unlike the BNC XML Edition (and BNC Baby), the BNC Sampler has not been annotated with lemmatized forms of each word, nor does it include simplified part-of-speech tags (pos).

tokenization In the BNC Sampler, words forming multi-word units are tagged as one word together. In the BNC XML Edition, multi-word units are marked using a <mw> element to enclose sequences of orthographic words, which are also tagged individually. For example, in the BNC Sampler the sequence ‘of course’ is marked up as follows:

<w type="RR">of course </w>

The multi-word unit is analyzed as an adverb and given one part-of-speech tag (RR). In the BNC XML Edition, however, the same sequence would be marked up as follows:

```
<mw c5="AV0"> <w c5="PRF"
hw="of" pos="PREP">of </w> <w c5="NN1" hw="course"
pos="SUBST">course</w> </mw>

The multi-word unit is analyzed as an adverb (AV0) and marked using a <mw> element. Its two component parts are analyzed separately, and each is annotated with a detailed part-of-speech code (in the c5 attribute), a headword (lemma) ( in the hw attribute) and a simplified part-of-speech code (in the pos attribute).

structural markup There are several differences in the way XML markup has been applied between the BNC Sampler and the BNC XML Edition. The treatment of overlapping speech is different; the elements used to mark-up structural divisions are different; the value-ranges and names of some attributes have changed, many header elements have changed their names, etc. We do not itemize these differences here, since the elements and attributes are fully documented in the complete User Reference Guides for the two corpora.

Most of the discussion of XML-specific matters in the documentation for BNC Baby applies equally to the XML version of the BNC Sampler. Most of the sample scripts provided however need modification.
